and food and prolonged strain, the Sheriff had compressed into a few hours activities that would astound any one who has not seen him at work in the last ten days.

Although he had been up all Monday night and chasing over Hudson county in search of police officers to deputize, and slept little more than an hour last night. Sheriff Kinkead was at the main gate of the Standard Oil Company's plant at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, before the first workman appeared. With him in his automobile sat Jeremiah J. Baly, the tall young man who came from Elizabeth to lead the strikers, was denounced as an interloper by the Sheriff and arrested after his ears had been boxed.

"I want you to take a good look at this man," shouted the Sheriff to the entering workmen, "so that you'll know him again. _on't let him stir up any more trouble."

When the last man had entered the works the Sheriff drove to police headquarters, where he had a heart to heart talk with Baly and Frank Tannenbaum, the I. W. W. agitator arrested in Mydosh Hall on Tuesday. Tannenbaum is popular with the strikers and had refused the Sheriff's invitation to accompany him and Baly to the plant.

"Sheriff, I got no money," said Baly in his flat, broken English. His captor gave him a dollar. "That'll get you back home, won't it?" he asked.
"Why did I let the boys go?" said the Sheriff to reporters, a twinkle in his blue eyes and a hint of brogue in his strong voice. "Baly promised me to be good, and I believe him. I let Tannenbaum go because he is no llar and is not afraid to stand up for what he believes. He's a fighter, and I like a fighter. I don't admire his doctrines, but I do admire his grit."

Then the Sheriff went in to telephone and fell foul of Commissioner Mara. After a tiff on Tuesday the Sheriff had sent two deputies to escort Mara to police headquarters yesterday morning.

Mara stood his ground and was promptly arrested.
"Dolan," said the Sheriff to one one of the faithful Boulevard police, "take this man to the street corner and see that he stands there until further orders."
